PREFACE

This report presents statistics on the number of inhabitants of the State, its counties, and minor civil divisions (townships, etc.). In addition, separate figures are also presented for urban places, wards of cities of 5,000 or more, and other areas of the State. These data are based upon tabulations from the Seventeenth Decennial Census of the population of the United States, its Territories, and possessions conducted as of April 1, 1950. Provision for the Seventeenth Decennial Census was made in the act providing for the Fifteenth and subsequent decennial censuses which was approved on June 18, 1929.

The major portion of the information compiled from the Census of Population of 1950 will appear in Volume I, Number of Inhabitants, and in Volume II, Characteristics of the Population. This report is a preprint of Chapter 50 (Wyoming) of Volume I, which is to present, in a single publication, statistics on the number of inhabitants for each State.

The materials presented here will also appear as Chapter A of Part 50 (Wyoming) of Volume II. Volume II will comprise a series of separately published parts, one for each State and a summary for the United States. The use of separate parts makes the basic materials on characteristics of the population for a given State available to the public in a single publication. Within the part for a State, Chapter A will recapitulate the statistics on the number and distribution of the population within a State; Chapter B will present statistics on the general characteristics of the population of the various political subdivisions of the State, such as counties, incorporated places, and the like; and Chapter C will present data on the detailed characteristics of the population of the larger areas within the State, such as cities of 100,000 inhabitants or more and standard metropolitan areas.

The materials presented here were prepared under the supervision of Howard G. Brunsman, Chief, Population and Housing Division, and Dr. Henry S. Shryock, Jr., Assistant Chief for Population Statistics, by Dr. Henry D. Sheldon, Chief, Demographic Statistics Section, Norman Lawrence, Chief, Population Distribution Unit, and Charles P. Brinkman; the compilation of the statistics was under the direction of Robert B. Voight, Assistant Chief for Operations. The collection of the information on which these statistics are based was under the supervision of Lowell T. Galt, Chief, Field Division. The geographic work, including the delineation of special types of urban territory and the preparation of maps, was under the supervision of Clarence E. Batschelet, Chief, Geography Division.

WYOMING

Number of Inhabitants

The State.—Wyoming was organized as a territory in 1868 with boundaries as at present from parts of Dakota, Idaho, and Utah Territories. It was admitted to the Union in 1890 as the forty-fourth State. Its population on April 1, 1950, according to the Seventeenth Census, was 290,529. The State has a land area of 97,506 square miles. In 1950 there was an average of 3.0 inhabitants per square mile as compared with an average of 2.6 in 1940. Among the States and the District of Columbia, Wyoming ranked forty-eighth in population and eighth in land area.

In 1870, the first year in which it was separately enumerated in a Federal census, Wyoming had a population of 9,118 (table 1). In 1950, 80 years later, the population was about 32 times as large. The rate of population growth was rapid in the nineteenth century, and the 1900 population was more than 10 times the 1870 figure. In the twentieth century, the growth has been at a more moderate rate, especially in the past three decades. Between 1940 and 1950 the population of the State increased by 39,787, or 15.9 percent.

Usual place of residence.—According to usual Census practice, which dates back to 1790, each person enumerated in the 1950 Census was counted as an inhabitant of his usual place of residence or usual place of abode, which is generally construed to mean the place where he lives and sleeps most of the time. This place is not necessarily the same as his legal residence, voting residence, or domicile, although, in the vast majority of cases, these different bases of classification would be identical.

In the application of this rule, persons were not always counted as residents of the places in which they happened to be found by the census enumerators. Persons in places where guests usually pay for quarters (hotels, etc.) were enumerated on the night of April 11, and those whose usual place of residence was elsewhere were allocated to their homes. Visitors found staying in private homes, however, were not ordinarily interviewed there. Information on persons away from their usual place of residence was obtained from other members of their families, landlords, etc. If an entire family was expected to be away during the whole period of the enumeration, information on it was obtained from neighbors. A matching process was used to eliminate duplicate reports for persons who reported for themselves while away and were also reported by their families at home.

Persons in the armed forces quartered on military installations were enumerated as residents of the States, counties, minor civil divisions, etc., in which their installations were located. Members of their families were enumerated where they actually resided. In the 1950 Census, college students living away from home were considered residents of the communities in which they were residing while attending college, rather than as persons temporarily absent from their parental homes as was the practice in 1940. In 1950 the crews of vessels of the American Merchant Marine in harbors of the United States were counted as part of the population of the ports in which their vessels were berthed on April 1, 1950. In 1940 such persons were treated as part of the population of the port from which the vessel operated. Inmates of institutions, who ordinarily live there for long periods of time, were counted as inhabitants of the place in which the institution was located; whereas patients in general hospitals, who ordinarily have short stays, were counted at, or allocated to, their homes. All persons without a usual place of residence were counted where they were enumerated.

Urban and rural population.—The 1950 urban population numbered 144,618 persons, or 49.8 percent of the population of the State (table 1). This population was living in 19 urban places in the State. Nearly two-thirds of this urban population was living in the 5 cities of 10,000 or more inhabitants (table 2).

The rural population of Wyoming comprised 145,911 persons, or 50.2 percent of the population of the State (table 1). Of the rural population, 20,115 persons, or 13.8 percent, were living in the 11 incorporated places and 1 unincorporated place of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants (table 2).

Urban definition.—Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

Since there were no urban-fringe areas or unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more in Wyoming in 1950 and there were no places urban under special rule in 1940, the distribution of the population by urban and rural residence is the same under both the new and old urban definition.

Trends of urban and rural population.—The urban population of Wyoming rose from 26,657 in 1900 to 144,618 in 1950. More than two-fifths of the 50-year gain came in the period 1940 to 1950, when the urban population increased by 51,041, or 54.5 percent. In 1900, 28.8 percent of the population of the State was urban; by 1950 the corresponding percentage had risen to 49.8. Over the 50-year period, the percentage of the population living in cities of over 10,000 inhabitants more than doubled, increasing from 15.2 to 32.2 percent (table 3).

The rural population of Wyoming increased from 65,874 in 1900 to 157,165 in 1940. Between 1940 and 1950, however, the rural population declined for the first time in the history of the State. As a result of the decline of 11,254, or 7.2 percent, in the rural population and the large increase in the urban population, the proportion of the population of the State classed as rural dropped from 62.7 percent in 1940 to 50.2 percent in 1950. The corresponding percentage in 1900 was 71.2 (table 1).

Counties.—The 23 counties in Wyoming ranged in size from Teton with a population of 2,593 to Laramie with a population of 47,662. Yellowstone National Park, the greater part of which is in Wyoming, is independent of any county organization. Of the 23 counties, 15 gained population between 1940 and 1950. Of the 8 counties which lost population, all but 2 had no urban population and 4 had also lost population in the previous decade (table 5).

Minor civil divisions.—To the primary political divisions into which counties are subdivided, the Bureau of the Census applies the general term "minor civil divisions." In Wyoming the minor civil divisions are election districts. The incorporated cities and towns bear varying relationships to the election districts. An incorporated place may be part of an election district, may be coextensive with an election district, or may be a combination of all or parts of two or more election districts.

Table 6 shows statistics on the population of each county by minor civil divisions for the last three censuses. The population of each incorporated place is shown in italics under the population of the district in which it is located. When an incorporated place lies in two or more districts, the population of the several parts is shown in table 6 under the appropriate district, and each part is designated by "part." Figures on the total population of such places are given in table 7. The one unincorporated place, Fox Farm-Orchard Valley, is designated by "uninc." Changes between the 1940 and 1950 Census in the boundaries of areas listed are shown in notes to table 6. For changes in boundaries prior to the 1940 Census, see reports of the Sixteenth Census (1940), Population, Vol. I, pp. 1185-1187, and reports of earlier censuses.

Incorporated and unincorporated places.—Wyoming had 89 places incorporated as cities or towns and 1 unincorporated place. These places range in size from Lost Springs town with a population of 9 to Cheyenne city with a population of 31,935. There were 182,870 persons living in the 89 incorporated places. The one unincorporated place delineated in the State, Fox Farm-Orchard Valley, had a population of 1,821.

Political units recognized as incorporated places in the 1950 Census are those which are incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns, and villages with the exception that towns are not recognized as incorporated places in the New England States, New York, and Wisconsin.

The Bureau of the Census has delineated boundaries for the thickly settled urban fringe around cities of 50,000 or more and has also delineated boundaries for unincorporated places of 1,000 or more which are densely settled population centers without corporate limits. Although there are unincorporated places within the urban fringe, it was not feasible to establish boundaries for such places and therefore they are not identified as separate places.

The count of urban places in the 1950 Census comprises all incorporated places of 2,500 or more regardless of location and unincorporated places of 2,500 or more which are located outside the urban-fringe areas. Incorporated places of less than 2,500 which lie in the urban fringe are not recognized as urban places.

Figures for 1930 and 1940 not available for unincorporated places and places incorporated subsequent to April 1, 1940. Boundary changes between 1940 and 1950 given in footnotes; for changes between 1930 and 1940, see reports of 16th Census (1940), Population, Vol. I, pp. 1185-1187.
